Death Cheated
By Navy Ship's Timely Arrival

SEATTLE, March 4 (AP)—Sixty persons rescued in lifeboats after the Seattle cargo liner Washington Mail broke up and sank in the frigid North Pacific last night were en route to Kodiak, Alaska, today aboard a Navy transport.

The Gen. H. B. Freeman was due to arrive at Kodiak at 11:00 a.m. PST tomorrow, after its almost unbelievable timely arrival at the sinking scene yesterday.

The scene of the nightmare experience was 700 miles northwest of here in virtually the same spot where the freighter Pennsylvania broke up in the same fashion, under the same conditions and sank with loss of all 46 men aboard four years ago.

The Washington Mail carried a general cargo of flour and lumber for Oriental points.

SOS Sent Out Earlier

Plunging and wallowing in the 20-foot swells raised by a 30-to-50-knot wind, the Washington Mail, a 7,943-ton freighter belonging to the American Mail Line, broke in at the No. 3 hold at 4:36 p.m. yesterday.

Apparently there had been some warning because the ship's master, Capt. Dudley A. Durrant of Seattle, had sent an SOS 12 minutes earlier, saying the ship was in distress.

Four hours sailing time away the USS Gen. Freeman, a Navy transport bound for Adak, in the Aleutians, and Japan, heard the call for help and turned toward the freighter's position.

Thirty minutes after the forward portion of the ship broke loose it sank, leaving the remainder of the Washington Mail tossing aimlessly about and in a sinking condition.

Take To Two Lifeboats

The captain held the 51 crewmen and nine passengers, including two Roman Catholic missionaries en route to service in the Orient, aboard the floundering hulk until shortly after 8 p.m.

Then he gave the "abandon ship" order and everyone took to two lifeboats, bobbed about like corks and were visible only a short distance because of snow flurries.

Meanwhile, two flying boats had arrived and were circling overhead to help guide the transport. Nearby, the after portion of the ill-fated ship rolled over and sank, only a scant few minutes after the persons aboard had taken to the water.

A transfer to the Freeman was quickly made, roll was called and everyone checked. All were accounted for and none, the Freeman messaged Kodiak, had suffered any injury.

Approximately 71 per cent of Baden-Wuerttemberg's 4,675,338 eligible votes went to the polls, despite blustery March weather and floods in country areas.

Unofficial final returns gave the CDU 1,391,728 votes or 42.6 per cent. This compared with 36 per cent which the party got in state elections in 1952 and 52.4 per cent which it won in federal elections in 1953.

Adenauer's main opponents, the Socialists, won 942,418 votes or 28.9 per cent. This compared with 28 per cent in 1952 and 23 per cent in 1953. The Socialists lost two seats in the State Parliament, dropping from 38 to 36.

The election was the first popular test of Adenauer's strength since his recent setback in the Ruhr. The result indicated he is still a popular figure in West Germany and may have a good chance for re-election next year when the nation chooses a new Parliament.

The Baden-Wuerttemberg voting was the last state test before the national election. Adenauer said he regarded it as a barometer for 1957.

The dead are Mrs. Helen Clark, 53, Coraopolis, and Mrs. Susan Druga, 44, Imperial.

Mrs. Francis Kaelin, 49, Oakdale, suffered from shock, leg lacerations and possible internal injuries.

The truck driver, Anthony Marcelli, 46, Pittsburgh, escaped injury.

The accident occurred at Quinn's Corners, near the intersection of routes 22-30 about 12 miles west of Pittsburgh.

State police said Marcelli told them an auto turned in front of him and he swerved his tractor-trailer to avoid a crash. When he did, the big vehicle jack-knifed and the steel rods smashed into the house — carrying the three women into the back yard.

Sen. Kefauver Urges Ike Call 'Summit' Talks

Demo Aspirant Says Meeting Could End
Middle East Crisis

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 4 (AP)—Sen. Kefauver (D-Tenn) demanded today that President Eisenhower call another "summit conference" to avoid the danger of war in the tense Middle East.

The Democratic presidential contender told a press conference new developments in the Middle East crisis make it imperative that Eisenhower "personally take a strong hand and use the prestige of the presidency" in reaching "a peaceful solution to Arab-Israeli difficulties."

"He should call a conference and he should do it now, before it is too late," Kefauver declared.

Open Meeting Advocated

The senator said participants should include Arab and Israeli leaders, and British and French representatives "because both these nations have interests there."

Kefauver said the talks "could be held in Washington or Cairo or anywhere else" and could be attended by "any other nations who might wish to join us in bringing about a settlement and a peaceful solution."

Such a meeting of heads of state "should have been held long ago, even before the British evicted the Suez," Kefauver asserted.

Break In N. H. Tour

"Developments coming from what we have done so far have only made matters worse," he said. "If, three years ago, we had shown a willingness to do economically what we are doing now—for example, building a dam at Aswan—a settlement might have been brought about and we would not now have the danger of war."

Sipping a cup of black coffee in a Manchester hotel lobby, Kefauver gave newsmen his views as he began the fourth day of his current five-day automobile campaign tour in New Hampshire.

Pontiff Warns Of 'False Peace'

VATICAN CITY, March 4 (AP)—Pope Pius XII warned today against the "mirage of false peace" which he said for "militant materialism" means only a truce.

The pontiff, now 80, spoke solemnly to ambassadors and ministers to the Holy See from 42 nations gathered to give him birthday greetings.

Militant materialism is the term the Pope usually uses when referring to communism.

He told the diplomats the forces of militant materialism "orient themselves in a direction which does not lead and cannot lead to day.

"Formulas like 'national unity and social progress' must not be abused," the Pope said. "For militant materialism the time of peace is merely a time of truce—a precarious truce which awaits only the social and economic collapse of other peoples."

The pontiff also expressed his concern that the "second technical revolution" of the present age may imperil the spiritual and moral values of man and his society.

How do the calls get short-circuited to Girard? Best guess is that someone has misdialed the "foreign area code" in dialing long distance direct.

Four Persons Killed
In N.D. Plane Crash

FARGO, N.D., March 4 (AP)—State Sen. Carroll E. Day, 50, of Grand Forks, N.D., his son and two others were killed when their light plane crashed in a snowstorm seven miles northwest of Fargo late last night.

Day, active in North Dakota politics, had flown to Fargo from Grand Forks to attend a basketball game. He was returning home when the single-engine plane crashed.

Killed were Day's son, Kingsley, who would have been 16 today; R. B. Arnason, 63, of Grand Forks; and his son, Harold, about 15.

Seventeen persons were aboard the big plane which burned yesterday off Iceland—in the same area where the same plane with the same crew narrowly escaped disaster a week before.

Officials will disclose only the rate of accidents per 100,000 hours of flying time, for worldwide operations.

British Ship Fired On

HONG KONG, March 4 (AP)—Chinese Nationalist guns on White Dog Island fired on the 3,559-ton British ship Dorintha when she left Foochow today, the royal navy reported. No casualties or damage were caused and the Dorintha continued on her course, the announcement added.

In the hospital since January 3 and faced with the prospect of many more months of skin-grafting surgery to repair damage done by burns over 75 per cent of her body, 4-year-old Martha Ann Miller, Knoxville, Tenn., still remains cheerful. She is shown here with her mother, Mrs. Thomas Miller. Martha Ann has a large group of backers in her struggle back to health—Kawanians and Shriners of Knoxville, who are underwriting the heavy costs. Burglars Remove Floodlighted Safe

CHICAGO, March 4 (AP)—Chicago display window featured burglars at work last night, but apparently no one saw them.

The window's floodlights were still on when the thief was discovered.

IUE To Consider Westinghouse Peace Formula

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP)—Officials of striking electrical workers today called a top-level meeting for tomorrow night to consider a government package proposal for ending the 140-day-old Westinghouse walkout.

The future of Nixon, a top target for attack by the Democrats, has become the chief subject of national political speculation since President Eisenhower announced last Wednesday he is available for renomination.

The President declined to say then whether he wants Nixon as a running mate. Previously Eisenhower had implied at a Jan. 25 news conference that—to an uncertain extent—it would be up to Nixon to determine his own political course.

Cabinet Offer Speculated

Without professing to know the details of conversations between the President and Nixon, friends of the vice president said they are convinced he wants to stay on the ticket.

There have been reports that if the President—or Nixon himself—should decide Nixon's presence on the ballot would be a liability, the vice president would be offered a Cabinet or some other high post when his present term ends.

Other speculation has been that Nixon himself might want to make some change that would enhance his political future.

He repeated his prediction that if the Democrats make Eisenhowers health an issue, they will lose votes. The people just don't like that type of campaign, Hall said.

Nixon "Great American"

Hall also repeated his statement that he is "assuming" the Republicans will again win the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket.

He said Vice President Richard Nixon was "a great American."

And Hall said Nixon felt that Eisenhower had handled the vice presidential question "absolutely right."

At his news conference last week, Eisenhower praised Nixon, but he said the selection of the vice president traditionally awaits the decision of the party convention on its presidential nominee.

Swedish Jets Crash

HALSINGBORG, Sweden, March 4 (AP)—Four Swedish jet fighters flying in close formation crashed on a fog-shrouded hill near here today and exploded. The air force said all four pilots perished.

Nevertheless, the feeling exists among some Republicans that because the 43-year-old Nixon has become such a controversial political figure he ought to be replaced with someone possibly more mature in years who is likely to have fewer shafts aimed at him by the opposition.

Federal mediators handed their plan to company and union representatives yesterday. Details of the proposals worked out by a special panel striving to end the longest major strike in two decades have not been disclosed. But a government source, close to the months-long negotiations, maintained they offer the "best chance yet" of settlement.

Eisenhower has made it clear that the vice presidential nominee must be thoroughly acceptable to him. He has given plenty of verbal evidence that Nixon fills this bill.

MP Assails "Cavorting" Lloyd, Dulles

Conservative Raps
British, American Policy In Mideast

LONDON, March 4 (AP)—Clamorous criticism of British and American policies in the Middle East sounded in Britain today as a result of the firing of the British commander of Jordan's Arab Legion.

The criticism crossed party lines as fears were expressed that the danger of war between Jews and Arabs had been made more acute by the removal of the steady influence of Lt. Gen. John Bagot Glubb from the service of Jordan after more than a quarter century.

Sir Robert Boothby, an outspoken Conservative member of Parliament, assailed what he called "cavorting" foreign secretaries, and declared in a newspaper article that Britain's Selwyn Lloyd and U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles should spend more time at their desks. Dulles is on a tour of the Far East, and Lloyd is visiting key Middle East capitals. Both are on their way to a meeting of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization in Pakistan.

Joint Policy Is Urged

"It is a mistake," Sir Robert said, "for foreign secretaries to spend half of their time cavorting all over the world. By so doing they have achieved nothing but loss of prestige."

Sir Robert insisted, "Britain and the United States must produce, without further delay, a joint policy for the Middle East which they failed to achieve in Washington." He referred to Prime Minister Eden's recent visit to President Eisenhower.

Hugh Gaitskell, leader of the Labor party, told a political rally, "The government has completely failed to match up to the new situation in the Middle East and the danger of war there is undoubtedly becoming more acute."

End Of Era At Hand?

Emmanuel Shinwell, who served first as defense minister in the Attlee Labor government, said, "It would not surprise me to see further trouble in Saudi Arabia and Iraq."

Britons, who have long prided themselves on being a stabilizing influence in the Middle East, were hard hit by the firing of Glubb. Many now freely acknowledge that the end of an era has come, and are demanding that a joint British-American policy be shaped to meet the situation. An underground voice here is that the United States is partly to blame for waging an "oil war."

Hughes Answers Criticism On Teacher Salary

Delegate George R. Hughes, minority leader in the House, has issued a statement in reply to criticism of his stand on school teachers' salaries by John D. Kelly, president of the Allegany County Teachers' Association.

Hughes said he is not surprised that Kelly disagrees with his stand on teacher salary increases but is surprised at the tenor of his remarks.

"When serious matters, such as the one at hand, develop into a public controversy, the only just and valid way to settle them is to go to the record, and after all relevant facts have been thoroughly aired, allow the public to decide which side is right. Therefore, I would like to put before the public my legislative record on the question of public education, including school teachers' salaries."

"First, during the 1955 session of the Legislature, I was appointed to a Special Committee to make a study of our state mental hospitals. On the night of the Shrine Country Club meeting at which the proposed teachers' salary increase was discussed, I was in Baltimore attending a meeting of this Mental Hospitals' Investigating Committee. Therefore, my absence from the teachers' meeting was unavoidable and was not due to an attitude-unfriendly to education" as Mr. Kelly has concluded.

Neely Confirms Mollohan Support

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., March 4 (UPI)—Sen. Matthew M. Neely (D-WV) of Fairmont said today that his protege and fellow townsmen, Rep. Robert H. Mollohan (D-WV), "will be the next governor of West Virginia."

Neely's statement, read during a reception for Mollohan staged at a Clarksburg hotel, formally confirmed the general impression throughout the state that Neely was supporting Mollohan, whom he first took under his political wing back in the 1940s.

Rev. Thomas G. Cross, of New Castle, Del., owner of the car, and his driver, Paul W. Leach, Woods Haven School, Claymont, Del., are suing R. E. Bennett of LaVale.

Another $500 suit was filed Saturday as a result of a collision at the intersection of Baltimore and North George streets. Eugene F. Whitfield of 12 West College Avenue, Frostburg, docketed the action against Donald Malamphy of 419 Park Street.

The declaration contends that on November 10, 1955 the auto operated by Malamphy collided with the car of Whitfield that was stopped for the passenger crosswalk at the intersection.

In doing so, the suit states, the clergyman's car ran into an auto operated by Lewis E. Jones Jr.

The lawyers for the clergyman point out that Jones received $359.93 in a compromise settlement when he sued Rev. Mr. Cross in New Castle County Court of Common Pleas, Del.

The suit claims the damage to the clergyman's auto is $104.50.

Reform Of Elections Could Help America

Election campaigns are expensive. In a way, that isn't a bad thing. It costs money to get a candidate's "message" across to the voters, but if both parties do that well enough the result may be an informed electorate. There is abundant experience to show that where little is spent on campaigns and the voters hardly know who's running, the results rarely serve good government.

But the abuse of campaign contributions is a problem that hasn't been licked. Congress apparently will try again to adopt legislation to limit abuses.

Maybe less emphasis this time should be put on limiting the amount contributed or spent than on how it is used. There should be some ceiling on contributions, though not one so unrealistic that it is universally evaded.

Among proposals now under consideration is one to raise the ceiling somewhat, but at the same time to impose more stringent regulations to assure that few expenditures go unreported. Allow about as much spending, in short, as is actually done now, but make sure that the spotlight of publicity falls squarely on it. This seems like a good trick if they can do it.

Another proposal, which is not new, is to permit taxpayers to deduct up to $100 for campaign contributions. The idea is to encourage the little fellow to put up a few dollars, making candidates less dependent on the big fellows.

Another idea would permit radio and television networks to give free time to major candidates "as a public service" without having to undergo the heavy expense of making equal time available to a dozen or more so-called parties that are just running for the exercise. This would help reduce a major item in the cost of serious campaigning.

The goal of all three proposals is the same—to make it more difficult for any contributor to "buy" any candidate. Success in reaching that goal would strengthen the American system.

The Leninist Dogma

It is not at all surprising that the Marxist-Leninist Dogma should be so little understood outside the Soviet Universal State. After all, Roman Catholics and Protestants belong to the Christian religion and they hardly ever understand each other and neither knows much about Judaism from which they both stem. Jews and Moslems originated from the same Semitic races and have religions which are closely akin but that has not made it possible for them to live in peace.

The Marxist-Leninist Dogma, in all its phases, seems absurd to the Western mind. The biologic interpretation of man, the complete omission of God and of any expression of mysticism, the elimination of personal liberty and the subordination of the individual to a social environment which not only dominates him but molds his personality, the avoidance of the profit concept in economics and the reconstitution of slave labor—the Western mind resists such notions of life.

It was easier when Stalin was the master of Russia because Stalin was a brutal autocrat, a 20th Century reincarnation of Genghis Khan. Stalin was not even true to the Marxist-Leninist Dogma, as the 20th Congress of the Communist Party USSR has now declared. He built his own dogma in book called "Foundations of Leninism," and he demanded an unfailing orthodoxy. He was uncompromising with those who even slightly deviated from his decisions which covered the entire gamut of human thought and activity. Deviators he had killed or, in a gender mood, he exiled them to the tundras of Siberia. He organized for world conquest and held his power until he died.

Opposition to Stalin was constant in Russia and in the world Communist parties. He met the opposition by purges in the course of which he destroyed his betters, the founders of his party. When I encountered Stalin at the Smolny Institute in Petrograd in 1917, he was not even newsworthy compared with Trotsky, Kamenyev, Zinoviev, Bukharin, etc. He killed them all.

After Stalin's death, the Communist party had either to return to the Marxist-Leninist Dogma or degenerate into a struggle for power among men ambitious to be dictators like Stalin. In 1952, the latter seemed possible in the triumvirate of Beria, Malenkov and Molotov which Stalin had appointed to succeed him. But the emergence of Khrushchev ended the struggle because he reverted to the Marxist-Leninist Dogma and to the dictatorship of the party rather than of one man. This is called "collective leadership."

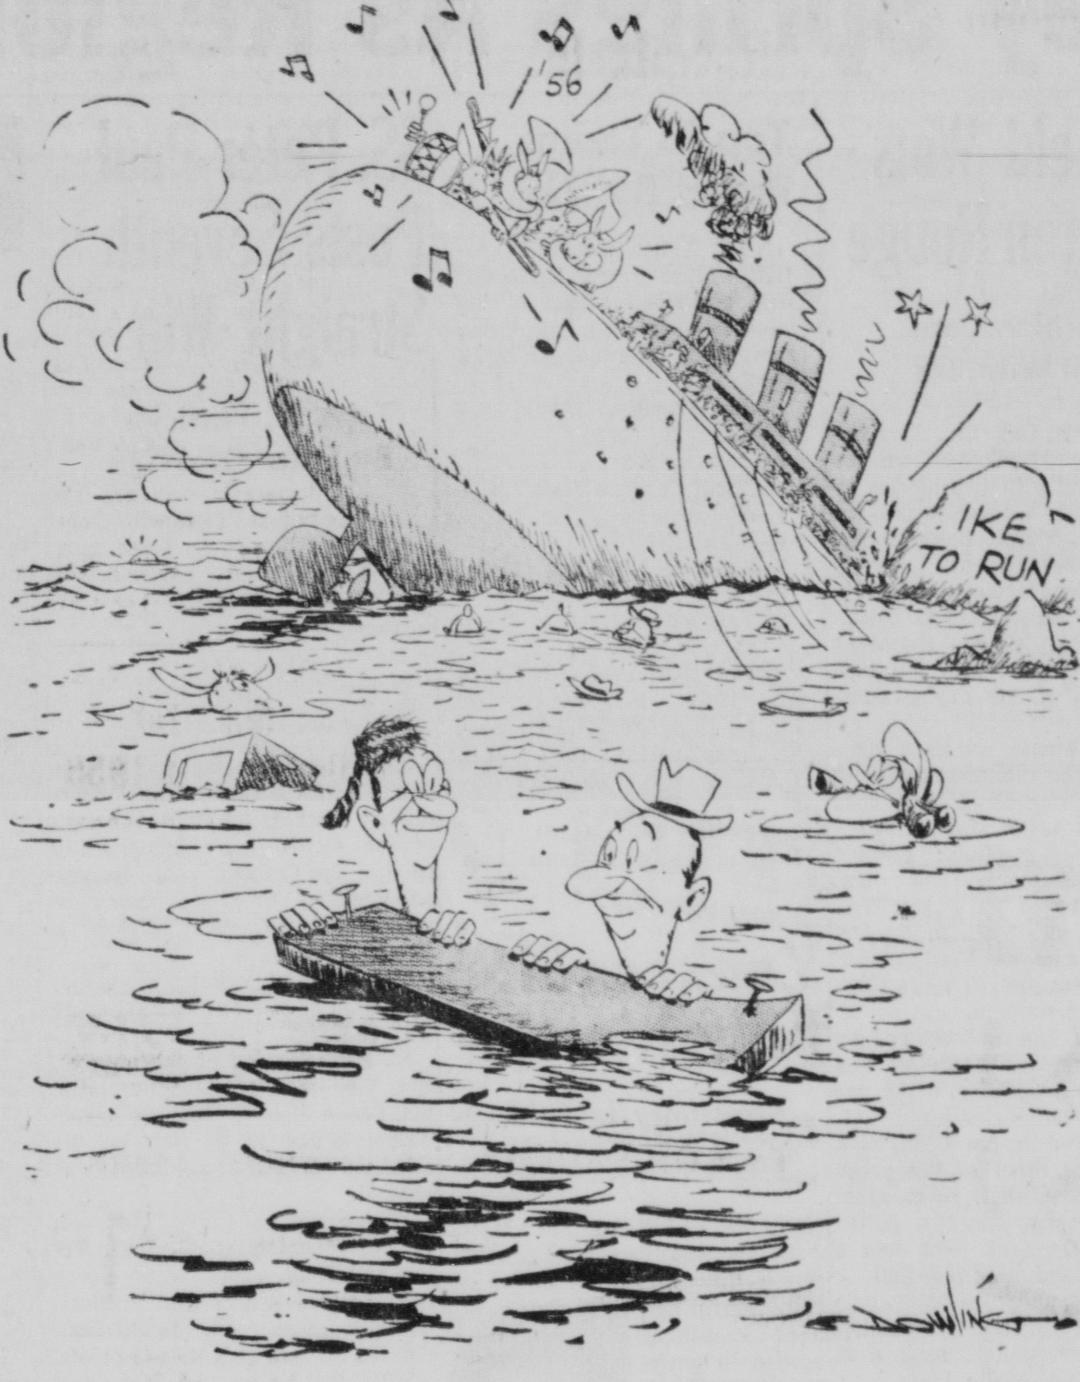

It is too early to grasp all that happened at the 20th Congress. However, it would seem to me that from an historic standpoint, this was a momentous gathering and that it is likely to strengthen the Soviet Universal State because it will bring into line dissident factions inside and outside Russia. To possess power, Khrushchev avoided the seizure of power, assuming that differences of opinion do not really amount to much in the long run. Whereas Stalin could not effect a change in government without committing murder, Khrushchev does not even deprive Malenkov and Molotov of office, thus making them increasingly dependent upon him. Undoubtedly, Khrushchev possesses a sense of humor which could not be said of Stalin.

The danger to the United States lies in this very sense of humor which makes Khrushchev more flexible than Stalin was. And it is this flexibility which has won for Khrushchev the great diplomatic victory of neutralism which is a peril to the United States. Stalin long played with the idea of moving into the Moslem world but found no way to do it; Khrushchev moved in boldly even while the summit conference was being held at Geneva. It is beyond belief that our officials did nothing about that except to say that the situation is precarious and ought not to become a campaign issue in 1956. The absurdity of the position of our State Department will become obvious when Israel too purchases arms from Czechoslovakia and Poland which possess ample means to arm any small nation that would like to do any fighting anywhere. What will John Foster Dulles say to that? Will he say that Soviet Russia encourages neutralism among our allies because they fear us? By that logic, why not encourage neutralism among some of Russia's satellites?

The 20th Congress, it strikes me, is a turning point in history and not a good one for us.

The Band's Showing A Lot Of Courage

Despite Obstacles, Nixon May Get Nod From GOP

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

WASHINGTON The people who are saying that President Eisenhower "is getting ready to dump Nixon" are even more wrong than the people who are saying that the President is far too fond of Nixon to tolerate any other vice presidential nominee.

The real Nixon story is a lot more complicated than that. It is true that the President has a warm affection for the Vice President. It is also true that the President, being a kind man and grateful to Nixon for his loyal service, would much prefer to make no change in the Republican ticket this year. Thus those who are betting that Dick Nixon will get the nod again have by far the best of the bargain, as of now.

Can Be Cold-Blooded

But for all his kindness and loyalty to his friends, Dwight D. Eisenhower has also shown that he can be pretty cold-blooded about members of his team who cease to look like assets. Harry Truman might have, indeed he probably would have fought to the end for any crony as close to him as Secretary of the Air Force Harold Talbot was close to Eisenhower. From Eisenhower, however, Talbot got the axe in very short order, with no greater consolation than a nice note and a military review. By the same token, the President did not conspicuously rush to the defense of his first secretary of health education and welfare, when Mrs. Hobby was in trouble with the Salk vaccine program.

For this reason, the President's affection for the Vice President is no sure guarantee of Nixon's future. The real status of Nixon was implied very clearly at the President's historic press conference, when Eisenhower declared

Nixon are only too easy to discern.

There is his marked unpopularity, first of all with the type of Republicans who would prefer a vice presidential nominee like Governor Christian Herter of Massachusetts. There is second, and actually more important, the bad showing Nixon has been making in the political polls. In these reporters' opinion, the results of the poll-takers are almost meaningless until the actual eve of the voting; but politicians scare very easily if the polls seem to show that a man is not a winner. It was this, in the last analysis, that cost Robert A. Taft the Republican presidential nomination.

The polls alone can perhaps cause Nixon to be dropped, if they show, for example, that an Eisenhower-Nixon ticket is markedly weaker than an Eisenhower-Hert ticket.

The polls may perhaps do just this, although no one can tell, until the noses are counted, how much the President's impaired health will cause the voters to weigh their choice by their opinion of the Vice President.

But then Dick Nixon, it should be remembered, has very great assets on his side, as well as very considerable obstacles to overcome. When Nixon has got into hot water, in the first place, he has invariably done so by sounding too much like a partisan politician; but he has sounded like a partisan politician precisely because the President, who wants to be above politics, has rather shrewdly depoted the political infighting to his vice president. Nixon has far more ability and judgment than his detractors suppose, and unless the President asks him to make partisan political noises, he is entirely capable of striking an altogether different note in the next six months.

Nixon Likely Nominee

In addition, the great majority of Republican organizations outside the Eastern states quite clearly prefer Nixon to any other vice presidential nominee. And finally and above all, there is no visible substitute for Nixon on whom the President's personal advisors can easily unite. Thomas E. Dewey would prefer Dewey, Harold Stassen would prefer Stassen, and so on through the list of hopefuls; and all the hopefuls' friends are similarly divided.

For Nixon, therefore, possession of the vice presidency is pretty certain to prove nine points of the law, unless the polls go too drastically against him or he makes some really bad bobbles.

Streptococcus Has Jekyll And Hyde Personality

105 degrees F. The ensuing symptoms are typical of a strep infection as well as erysipelas, scarlet fever, and rheumatic fever. These microorganisms have a dual personality, like Jekyll and Hyde.

Pain radiates into the ears, occasionally giving the impression that these organs are involved also. Tenderness is noted when pressure is applied at the angle of the jaw. This is due to inflammation of the neck glands which are numerous in this area.

In the past, strep sore throat usually lasted five or six days before subsiding spontaneously. Complications were not unusual and, in many instances, the disease was prolonged by ear involvement, pneumonia, sinus trouble, or rheumatic fever. The latter gets the strep sore throat its stigma.

On many occasions I have warned patients with strep throat to take care of themselves and in addition, not expose others to the infection. They may transmit the organisms to someone who is susceptible to rheumatic fever, the disease that damages the heart.

It is remarkable that penicillin, the first antibiotic, is still our most effective weapon against this group of micro-organisms.

Its early use helps decrease the chances of complications. The remedy also is employed as a prophylactic measure during epidemics in schools, institutions, and military installations. These outbreaks can be terminated abruptly if all the inmates receive simultaneously a single injection or a few tablets of penicillin.

Apparently cold stimulates the bladder. In addition, more urine is manufactured during the winter because less water is lost through perspiration.

The majority are not, but the few that become chronic give the lesions their bad reputation. They fail to heal because nothing is done to eliminate the varicose veins.

Another possibility is that the condition is misdiagnosed and the ulcer stems from poor circulation rather than to varicose veins.

For this reason, the President's affection for the Vice President is no sure guarantee of Nixon's future. The real status of Nixon was implied very clearly at the President's historic press conference, when Eisenhower declared on the one hand that the choice of the vice presidential nominee would have to wait until the Republican convention, and on the other hand praised Nixon in the highest terms. Those who speak with undoubted authority have now paraphrased these seemingly double-edged presidential remarks about as follows:

"I'd like to have Dick Nixon on the ticket with me, but I'm not going to commit myself because something may happen to change my mind."

Obstacle Race Ahead

For Nixon, therefore, the next six months are going to be a particularly dangerous obstacle race, in which the penalty of failure will be the President changing his mind. The obstacles ahead of

Republican Senators Not In Accord On Settlement Of Farm Question

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—Republican senators met behind closed doors the other day to settle the farm question. What happened is supposed to be a GOP secret, but this column can report they left the question more unsettled than ever.

In fact, the top Republicans on the Senate Agriculture Committee, Vermont's curly-haired George Aiken, not only left the question but left the meeting. He walked out in a huff during an impassioned plea for high farm supports by Minnesota's big Ed Thye.

Both Aiken and Thye were raised on farms, and both still look happier in overalls. On farm legislation, however, they are just as opposite as a chicken farmer and a fruit farmer—which they both are. Aiken, the fruit farmer, believes devoutly in Secretary of Agriculture Benson's flexible farm supports. Thye, a chicken farmer, is just as adamant in favor of rigid, 90 per cent parity payments.

At the closed-door session, Thye warned his fellow Republicans that the Benson plan would remain an issue with farmers for years to come and would be held against the GOP. It was at this point that Aiken, scowling darkly, stomped out of the room.

Earlier, another farm senator, North Dakota's long, lean Milt Young, sounded a warning against the Benson program. He claimed that flexible price supports, if continued, would have disastrous political repercussions for Republicans in the farm belt. This observation was seconded by South Dakota's roly-poly, cigar-puffing Sen. Karl Mundt.

Will Ike Veto?

Young urged his fellow Republicans to desert the administration and vote for the Democrat-sponsored, high-parity farm bill. The only thing the Senate could do to relieve the farmers this year, he pleaded, would be to pass 90 per cent price supports.

In answer to an objection that this would pile up staggering surpluses, Young pointed out that the Agriculture Department has acreage limitations on the basic crops.

"There will be the same number of acres at 90 per cent," he said, "as under flexible supports."

Iowa's stern Sen. Bourke Hickenlooper noted that corn farmers habitually ignore the acreage restrictions and dump their excess corn on the open market. He suggested that the solution wasn't flexible supports, however, but more realistic acreage allotments.

At one point, Sen. Charlie Potter of Michigan asked whether the President would veto a high-support farm bill. Senate GOP Leader Bill Knowland of California suggested it would depend on the language of the bill.

"The President never makes a statement about a bill until he sees it," said Knowland.

NOTE—Instead of adopting a GOP policy on farm legislation, the Republicans ended up in more disagreement than ever. All they seemed to agree upon was that the final farm bill would be a patchwork of amendments.

Adlai And Estes

Adlai Stevenson is waging a smart remote-control campaign to win New Hampshire away from Sen. Estes Kefauver in the coming presidential primary.

Stevenson is playing a game of heads-i-wins-tails-you-lose. He is pouring in money and waging a vigorous campaign against Kefauver without appearing to do so. This will enable him to claim no contest if Kefauver wins or take credit for a victory without trying, if Kefauver loses.

The Stevenson forces are outspending the Kefauverites two to one—printing sample ballots, distributing campaign literature and hiring campaign help. They have the backing of most labor leaders and Democratic regulars, who were whipped by Kefauver in the 1952 primary and are now out for revenge.

Stevenson's undercover campaign manager in New Hampshire ironically is a Kefauver protege, National Committeeman Henry Sullivan. Kefauver got his job in 1952, but Sullivan later climbed aboard the Stevenson bandwagon and is now running the campaign against his former benefactor.

Stevenson's strongest support will come from Mayors Joseph Benét of Manchester and Edward Charpentier of Somersworth, whose city organizations are drumming up votes for Adlai.

One Stevenson tactic was to run three secret Stevenson men as Kefauver delegates in an attempt to split the Kefauverites. However, Iowa's stern Sen. Bourke Hickenlooper noted that corn farmers habitually ignore the acreage restrictions and dump their excess corn on the open market. He suggested that the solution wasn't flexible supports, however, but more realistic acreage allotments.

At one point, Sen. Charlie Potter of Michigan asked whether the President would veto a high-support farm bill. Senate GOP Leader Bill Knowland of California suggested it would depend on the language of the bill.

Soap Box Derby Is Discontinued

Event Is Cancelled After Eight Years

Cumberland's Soap Box Derby, a mid-summer affair for the past eight years, will be discontinued.

Derby sponsors here have been notified by All-American Soap Box headquarters in Detroit that Cumberland's franchise has been can-canceled.

John J. McMullen, publisher of the Times and Alleganian Company, has received the following letter from W. J. "Jake" King, general manager of the All-American Soap Box Derby, Inc.:

"For the past five years one of the requirements of the Soap Box Derby agreement was to have at least 50 or more qualified contestants compete in a local race each year. On the basis of past contestant performance, we regret that a Soap Box Derby agreement will not be offered for the current year."

The Derby for boys 11 to 15 years of age, has been co-sponsored here by the Times-News and Eiler Chevrolet, Inc., with the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce furnishing the manpower.

There were 50 participants in 1953 and more than 55 entries in 1954 and again last year. Due to disqualifications and withdrawals, however, there were only 48 actual contestants each of the past two years.

Winners starting with 1948 were: William Burns, Keyser; Neil Jones, Midland; Ernesto Mellon, McCoole; Ricardo Mellon, McCoole; Bobby Gero, Cumberland; George Dyer, Cumberland; Jimmy Mellon, McCoole and Roger Taylor, Wiley Ford.

All-America headquarters also has cancelled the agreement of Hagerstown.

Hundley And Floyd Head Conference's All-Tourney Team

RICHMOND, Va., March 4 (P)—The consistent brilliance of West Virginia's Rod Hundley and Furman's Darrell Floyd in the Southern Conference Basketball Tournament was rewarded today with their unanimous selection to the all-tournament team.

Hundley, the indispensable man for the champion Mountaineers, and Floyd, the two-time All-American who set a tournament scoring record with 43 points in the first round, each was named on every one of the ballots cast by 31 newspaper and radio men covering the tournament. Each picked up the maximum of 155 points in the voting.

Richmond's tournament runners-up, who lost to West Virginia 58-56 in last night's final, placed two of their aces on the team—Walt Lysaght and Ed Harrison, each of whom finished with 145 points. Rounding out the team is Washington and Lee's prize sophomore, Don Flora, the key figure in W&L's first-round upset of top-seeded George Washington. Flora polled 114 points.

Waugh Is Loser

FT. MYERS, Fla., March 4 (P)—Jim Waugh, promising right hand pitcher of a few years ago who is trying a comeback with the Pittsburgh Pirates, gave up five hits in three innings today as the Pirates went through their first intra-squad game of the training season.

Gair Allie, playing shortstop for the losers, had six chances and muffed three of them for errors.

Today's Sermonette

that looked so strong and impressive had been built upon the sand.
It went down before the surging flood of uncontrollable desire. There was a moral collapse.

The house may fall because of lack of faith. During the second World War Dr. Leslie Weatherhead received a letter from a broken-hearted woman. "My husband has been killed in the war. My boy was on a ship that has been torpedoed.
Why do you go on talking about the love of God? There cannot be a God. Why do our men have to suffer like this? No human father would let happen, and you keep on praying about a God who loves.
We can't bear it." Her life had fallen in. She forgot that the man who told us to build our house upon the rock suffered more than any of us, and yet His faith held.

Jesus said he that heareth and doeth these words of mine. It is not enough to hear, we need to be doers, and this is more than an emotional experience. A woman said to Jesus one day, "Blessed is the womb that bore thee, and the breasts that thou didst suck." But Jesus turned and said, "Yea rather, blessed are they that hear the word of God and keep it."

William James said, "No matter how full a reservoir of maxims one may possess, and no matter how good one's sentiments may be, if one has not taken advantage of every concrete opportunity to act, one's character may remain entirely unaffected for the better."

When wishing, and longing are translated into acting, then they are translated into character. Christ has a word for every situation and if I hear it and do it my house will be built upon the rock.

One winter night in a tiny cottage in a Scottish glen a fine old Scotsman lay dying. It was a wild stormy night. Only his daughter and he were in the house. "Father," said the daughter, "would you like me to read the Bible to you?"

"Na, na, lassie," said the old saint, his eyes full of the light streaming already from the other land. "I thatched me house before the storm began."

The storm will assail us sooner or later. We must work while it is day. He that receives the words and translates them into action and deeds builds his house upon the rock and the floods do not destroy it. Wise builders are men like that. Their character is the fabric of the City of God, and their strength is not for themselves alone. It is part of the glory of God.

6:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 6, at 7:30 p.m.; Advisory Board meeting at the home of Mrs. Roland C. Staup at 8:30 p.m.

The Rt. Rev. Noble C. Powell,
D.D., Bishop, will be at St. Peter's church on March 20 to administer the Sacrament of Confirmation to those who are in the present confirmation classes.

The report was that the Goodman-Kovens 5th District group and the Coggins-O'Malley 3rd District organization were involved. Both factions have been unfriendly to Baltimore's Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro, a staunch supporter of former Sen. Millard E. Tydings for the nomination.

Goodman said, "As of this time I have not committed myself personally towards any senatorial Democratic primary candidate."

Meanwhile, Tydings has announced that J. Newton Brewer Jr., Montgomery County investment banker, will head his finance committee. The 38-year-old Rockville resident was active in the unsuccessful campaign of H. C. Byrd for the governorship in 1954. Byrd lost to Gov. McKeldin after narrowly defeating Mahoney for the nomination.

Mahoney's headquarters has announced what it calls its first major organized political support from a Baltimore city district. The 7th Ward First Bohemian Democratic Club, "an important unit of the 2nd District organization," issued a statement favoring Mahoney on Saturday.

5-Year-Old Boy Fatally Burned By Gasoline

Valley Road Tot Lives Seven Hours

A five-year-old Valley Road boy was fatally burned yesterday afternoon when his clothing caught fire as he or his brother poured gasoline on a small open fire.

Admitted to Memorial Hospital about 3 p.m. was Gary Gentry, son of Mrs. Mary M. Gentry, following the mishap in which a relative was burned about the hands attempting to put the blaze out.

Hospital attaches said last night the youngster had second and third degree burns over more than 90 per cent of his body. He died at 9:45 p.m.

He was brought to the hospital by Eugene Appold, who tore the burning clothing from the boy's body and beat out the flames with his bare hands.

Rescuer Treated

Appold was treated for severe burns of the right hand at the hospital and was discharged.

Appold said last night young Gary was playing with his brother, Robert "Butch" Gentry, 8, and some other children and that they apparently built a small fire in the yard of the Gentry home.

Somewhat Gary and Robert got hold of a two-gallon gasoline can which still had some gasoline in it. While playing Gary apparently spilled some of the gasoline on his clothing.

Later, Appold said, one of the boys poured the gasoline from the can onto the fire. It suddenly blazed up and caught the younger brother's clothing afire as he was standing beside Robert.

Beats Out Flames

Appold said he heard the cries of the boy and the other children, and rushed from the Gentry house where he was visiting to find the tot's clothes a mass of flames.

He tore the clothing away from the lad's body and beat out the flames with his hands, he said.

Then wrapping the boy in a heavy blanket, Appold put him in his car and rushed the youngster to the hospital.

Members of the family last night were unable to explain where the brothers obtained the gasoline can. They explained they were not aware the children had built the fire in the yard until the accident occurred.

The Gentrys live on Valley Road in Bowman's Addition just a short distance from the Bowman's Addition Fire Hall.

Five Farmers Adopt Soil Saving Plans

Five more Allegany County farmers have become soil conservation cooperators in the past month. Martin M. Gordon, aide in the local office of the Soil Conservation Service, reported to the Board of Supervisors of the Allegany Soil Conservation District.

The new cooperators are Frank Humbertson, 210-acre farm on Warrior Mountain; Joseph L. Martin, 70 acres along Knob Road; Regina M. McCullly, 73 acres at Union Grove; Leander Whorton, 125 acres near Oldtown, and E. R. Simpson, 12 acres on Baltimore Pike.

Ernest R. Slider, chairman of the Board of Supervisors, plans to attend the Board meeting of the Maryland Association of Soil Conservation Districts at the Lord Baltimore Hotel in Baltimore March 23.

The supervisors received word from the Allegany County Board of Commissioners that the board will pay the $142 required for the Soil Conservation District signs which have been installed at five points along the county line. Two are on U. S. 40, two on U. S. 220 and one on Md. 51.

Gordon also informed the supervisors at their meeting Friday that a pond survey had been conducted on the farm of Ronald Lohr at Twiggton. He also said that Frank Humbertson has borrowed the mechanical "bush hog" to cut up apple prunings on his orchard.

Kenneth M. Stone, soil scientist connected with the local Soil Conservation Service office, reported that he had surveyed about 1,200 acres in the Haystack Mountain area.

Congratulatory Letter Campaign Helps Local Industrial Promotion Efforts

One of the seemingly insignificant projects of the Industrial Promotion Department of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce which may in the long run prove of immeasurable value is a congratulatory letter campaign.

Albert H. Hargreaves, director of the Industrial Promotion Department, explained it this way. A member of his staff scans the Wall Street Journal each day checking the column concerning the promotion of executives in major industries across the country.

All of these promoted executives except those employed by a corporation which for obvious reasons would not be interested in Cumberland receive congratulatory letters.

Since the Industrial Promotion Department was established in late 1952, Hargreaves estimates about 2,000 of these congratulatory letters have been mailed out from his office. About 400 of these busy executives have taken the time to answer these letters.

Probably half of the 400 have asked for some additional information about the industrial prospects in the Cumberland area. The other 200 came from industries in 27 American states, the District of Columbia, Canada and England.

Several of the companies subsequently became actively interested in the Cumberland area and despite the fact that no specific new industries can actually be attributed to the letter-writing program, Hargreaves believes that the program is highly successful from a public relations standpoint.

A reply letter from Glenn Koger, vice president and general manager of the Torrance (Calif.) plant of the Rome Cable Corporation, illustrates the point.

He wrote, in part: ". . . We appreciate your interests in our operations and feel that you and other similar organizations are doing a fine job in promoting your communities. Industry has its obligations to a community but it most certainly needs a community's understanding of its problems."

Some of the best-known men in American industry have sent replies to Hargreaves after having received congratulatory letters. Typical are Harlow H. Curtice, who since early 1953 has been president of General Motors Corporation, and Louis E. Wolfson, who last year gained national recognition in his unsuccessful efforts to assume control of Montgomery Ward.

One of the firms which became actively interested in this area after receiving a letter from Hargreaves was a New England metal company, which previously had given no thought to a new location for a plant. Although Cumberland was not selected, the firm did locate a branch plant at nearby Winchester, Va. A safety razor company was similarly interested in this area and eventually settled in a motion picture.

The weekly meeting of the Cumberland Lions Club will be held Wednesday at 12:15 p.m. in the Community Room of the YMCA. Guest speaker will be George Yea, manager of the Baltimore office of Dun and Bradstreet, whose topic will be "Credit-Man's Confidence in Man." His talk will be highlighted by a motion picture.

The Allegany County Delegation successfully pushed a House resolution in 1955 calling for the state to purchase and maintain the property.

Its proposals this year ranged from such suggestions as exempting members of the clergy, religious institutions and students from jury duty (which didn't pass), to creation of a State port authority with broad powers to expand and promote the Port of Baltimore (which did pass after 48 amendments were placed on it).

Another council proposal was to increase the racing season at Maryland's horse tracks to bring the State's 93-year-old constitution in more revenue. This, which also was proposed by McKeldin, was changed before passage to increase.

To establish a tax court to hear appeals on property assessments, which failed in the Senate.

To abolish the present State Roads Commission and replace it with a director. This measure didn't get out of committee.

The council was created in 1939.

Legislative Council Has Good '56 Batting Average

ANNAPOLIS, March 4 (AP)—The Legislative Council, a group created to study legislative questions between sessions of the Maryland General Assembly, scored better than average in enactment of its proposals by the 1956 session.

Of 63 bills introduced by the council in the first day of the session, 39 were enacted and 23 already have been signed into law by Governor McKeldin.

A reply letter from Glenn Koger, vice president and general manager of the Torrance (Calif.) plant of the Rome Cable Corporation, illustrates the point.

The fund was included, he said, as a result of a concerted effort by Allegany County legislators to have the state acquire the property and keep it as a historical monument.

Delegate Harry W. Edwards, of Garrett County, he said, helped the cause along in the General Assembly.

erty of the old Toll Gate House in the Rome Cable Corporation.

Senator See said a $10,000 item for the purchase of the old Toll Gate House is included in the Capital Improvements Bill passed by the General Assembly.

erty of the old Toll Gate House in the Rome Cable Corporation.

Senator See said a $10,000 item for the purchase of the old Toll Gate House is included in the Capital Improvements Bill passed by the General Assembly.

The fund was included, he said, as a result of a concerted effort by Allegany County legislators to have the state acquire the property and keep it as a historical monument.

Delegate Harry W. Edwards, of Garrett County, he said, helped the cause along in the General Assembly.

"... We appreciate your interest in our operations and feel that you and other similar organizations are doing a fine job in promoting your communities. Industry has its obligations to a community but it most certainly needs a community's understanding of its problems."

Some of the best-known men in American industry have sent replies to Hargreaves after having received congratulatory letters. Typical are Harlow H. Curtice, who since early 1953 has been president of General Motors Corporation, and Louis E. Wolfson, who last year gained national recognition in his unsuccessful efforts to purchase and maintain the property of the old Toll Gate House in the Rome Cable Corporation.
